Late Summer 2023

or thereabouts

Hey everyone. Hope the summer heat is about over for a while!

Some of you who were at the Pittsburg, TX, Pioneer Days festival this past weekend got a glimpse of one of my newest books, "Look, Look, Look What I did!" This is a story of a young chick who wanted so desperately to be like the other hens that she tricked everyone into thinking she laid eggs. She ended up in a world of hurts. This short story teaches children to be the person they were created to be and be proud of who they are without giving in to peer pressure. If you didn't get a copy, run by my website or find it on Amazon.

Reading Should Be FUN!

Gathering of Authors

If you just happen to be in Texarkana, AR on November 4th, drop on in to see what's going on.

The 14th Annual Gathering of Authors will be meeting for book signings, speakers, music, food, and some local vendors scattered around. Silent auction for very nice items, Kid's Corner and lots of door prizes. Entry and food is all free.

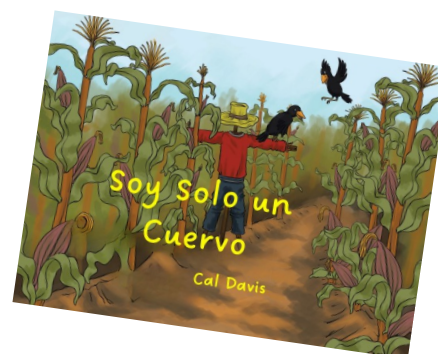

This event has proudly supported autism awareness for over a decade. For more info, go to gatheringofauthors.com.

If you get a chance, make the beautiful drive up to Arkansas and come see me.

Soy Solo un Cuervo Para mis amigos de habla hispana, este libro es la traducción del Mom's Choice Award Bedtime Story, "I'm Just a Crow". Los colores brillantes y vibrantes y los pájaros hacen de este libro un gran cuento para dormir y muestra a nuestros jóvenes a ser siempre ellos mismos.

For my English-speaking friends, this book is the translation of the Mom's Choice Award Bedtime Story, "I'm Just a Crow." Bright and vibrant colors and birds make this book a great bedtime story and shows our youngsters to always be themselves.

Here's an activity. Color the picture, then write a short story about what's going through the snail's mind. Email it to me for a shout out in the next newsletter.

Want to write books, but where to start?

Have you ever wanted to write books, but just didn't know where to start? A Children's Writing Conference will be happening on Saturday, January 27. The event is sponsored by the Northeast Texas Writers Organization (NETWO). I will be speaking on just that topic...How do I start? My personal beginning in writing was tough, but I'm glad I had friends who helped me and didn't make me feel like an idiot. Registration is not open yet but you can go to www.netwo.org for more information.
